SWEATING THE DETAILS

The Clarion Mediterra 23 takes over 3,000 hours to construct. Expert craftsmanship is evident in every phase of the building process. From the initial framing to the final coats of UV-resistant varnish, you can be sure that your Clarion receives the utmost attention to detail.

Every Clarion is the ideal blend of meticulous craftsmanship with modern technology in design materials. The result is the best of both worlds: sophisticated beauty combined with performance, durability, and lower maintenance.

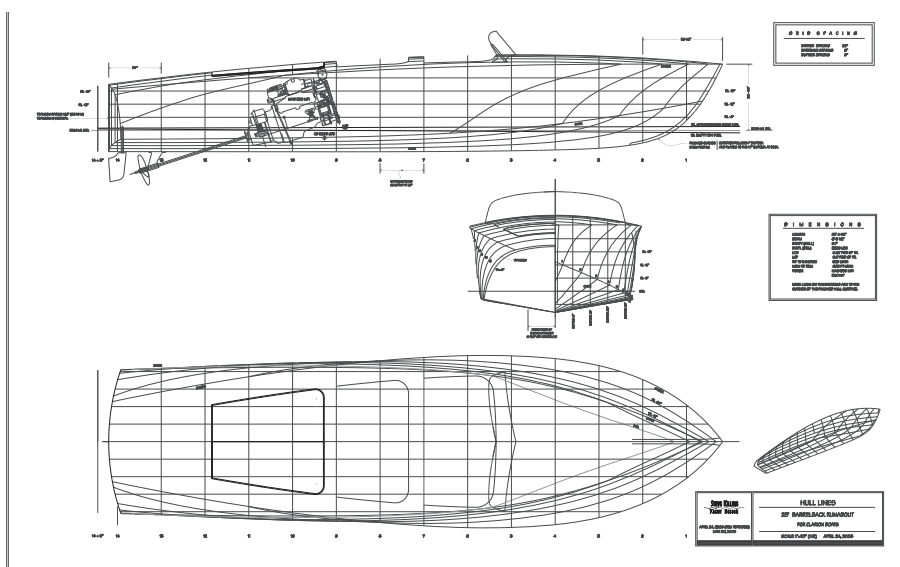

CLARION TECHNOLOGY

Clarion Boats of Muskoka employs the WEST (Wood Epoxy Saturation Technology) system. We build boats that have all the sophistication and beauty of the classic mahogany runabout, but do not require the regular maintenance that makes traditional wooden boats impractical for all but devoted vintage enthusiasts.

With the WEST system, all structural wooden components are protected by multiple coats of marine-grade epoxy before construction, effectively making them waterproof and immune to the effects of fluctuations in weather and water conditions. This Epoxy Saturation is designed to prevent leakage and rot. In short, the WEST system produces a product that is as durable, strong and low-maintenance as a conventional fiberglass boat but has all the style, class and distinction of a wooden boat. The best of both worlds.

Computerized CNC machines are used to cut wooden components such as frames. This achieves zero tolerances for accurate, strong connection.

1 Craftings a custom striking sunburst mahogany and padauk deck treatment. 2 Eight coats of varnish; the colour is getting deeper and richer. 3 Elegant two-tone upholstery as chosen by our client.
